Key Insights

What the catalogue shows, and the limits of the data

Overview

Growth & Timing

Genres

Key Insights

1. Movies dominate, TV is rising

25% → 34%

The catalogue is 70% movies, but TV shows grew from 25% of new additions in 2018 to 34% in 2021.

2. Growth peaked in 2019

2,016

Additions rose from 82 titles in 2015 to 2,016 in 2019, then slowed in 2020.

3. Countries specialise

92% vs 74%

92% of Indian titles are movies, while 74% of South Korean titles are TV shows (K-dramas). Japan is 63% TV (anime).

4. Mostly adult content

46%

46% of titles are rated for adults (TV-MA is the top rating). Only 10% are for young kids, though TV carries more kids' content (17%) than movies (7%).

5. Newer movies are shorter

96 vs 104 min

Movies released from 2015 run a median 96 minutes vs 104 for older films (Mann-Whitney U test, $p < 0.001$).

6. Most series end early

67%

Two in three TV shows have only one season, and 37% of all titles are added in the same year they are released.

About the data

- Source: Kaggle "Netflix Movies and TV Shows" (Shivam Bansal): 8,807 titles added up to September 2021, so 2021 is a partial year.
- Cleaning (Python): fixed 3 shifted rows, filled missing director / cast / country as "Unknown", parsed dates, split duration into minutes and seasons, grouped 14 ratings into 4 audiences.
- Model: Titles fact table with genre and country bridge tables (a title can have several), filtering in both directions; 21 DAX measures.
- Limitations: shows what is available on Netflix, not what people watch; country and director are missing for some titles.
